

Red, White and Blue

On a crisp Spring morning,
You are awoken by trumpets playing the national anthem,
Birds chirping and the happy chatter from the Englishmen.

A flag being waved flashing contrasts of red, white and blue,
The games and fun have already started, and it makes the dream day.
You lie back into your luxury bed and are startled by 2 excitable corgi's,
1 hungry cocker spaniel and a mischievous dorgi.

You decide to greet your people and start to celebrate your 70 years of being queen!

You remember the young you putting that shiny crown on your head and then realise that your husband has passed away and that this is the first celebration without him,
You hold out your hand and realise he's not there to hold it too.

Before you go outside you look out of your window, and you see the flashing contrasts of a red, white and blue flag being waved on your favourite hill.

You then say, "May peace and love be upon this Earth".